BRILLIANT SANDS

Early arrivals at the Mattapoisett Beach on Saturday morning do a little weekend baking. About as many people were in the water as were on the sand as the sun did its best in the opening of the summer season. The beach is not officially open yet, but the urge waits for no deadline as swimmers try to cool it. Photo, DCJ

Conway Realtors, agent for the company, has been inviting towns within a 25-mile radius of Plymouth for possible headquarters.

Selectman James F. Huntoon said the company is looking at sites in southeastern Massachusetts to locate its executive offices and that there would be no manufacturing. "This would be a tremendous potential for Mattapoisett," said Huntoon. He added that ten percent of the process is in the selling - to create an interest in Mattapoisett. "And we have a reason to be biased."

Huntoon said, "We've sent them information about Mattapoisett's services and availability to the nearest airport, hotels and the nearest highway access to town, plus a report of the study made by Southeastern Regional Planning and Economic Development District."

Steven Reckhow of SRPEDD will give a presentation on the proposed Hi-Tech park proposal at 8 p.m. June 19 in the Town Hall Conference Room. The Hi-Tech Park is proposed for a 200-acre tract south of the town's present industrial park. The public is invited to attend the presentation.

In other business, Selectmen:

AGREED to wait until the fall to call a meeting with the herring inspectors and Boards of Selectmen of Mattapoisett, Marion and Rochester to discuss the problem of the poor yield at the Herring Run in Mattapoisett.

"There are definite problems", the board noted after reading a letter from William D. Watling, Rochester's Herring Inspector.

Watling has requested to hold a meeting with inspectors and board members of the three towns. Watling outlined the disappointing yield of herring (alewives) as the reason for the proposed closing of the Mattapoisett River to commercial fishing.

Watling has proposed closing the river for 15 years, or five three-year spawning cycles, in order to build up the herring population in the river. Huntoon, who is chairman of the Tri-Town River Committee, said the board will contact the state to review the poor yield and will consult with state biologist Joseph DiCarlor of Sandwich before making any decision.

"After we receive more information we will call a joint meeting in the fall with the inspectors and selectmen," Huntoon said. He added, "In my opinion, the river should be cleaned up but not closed down."

NOTED that Mattapoisett will receive an estimated Revenue Share allocation of $112,322.

Also noted that the State Department of Revenue's 1984 equalized valuation for Matta-poisett is $195,928,435. The town's assessors feel this figure is accurate.

Chairman John DeCosta noted the evaluation is done every two years and that the higher the amount the less local aid the town receives. The 1982 valuation was $179,300,000.

Selectmen giving Kelley's viewpoint of the problem:

The subject of the dispute at the Village Court Apartments has been rectified, and I feel that the strain of the situation is more relaxed now. The safety of the people within the complex can be better assured now that the exterior portion of the fire alarm system comes within the scope of the Mattapoisett Fire Alarm Rules and Regulations.

This problem was brought to your attention and to the attention of the Housing Authority on October 17, 1983 by a letter after I met with the Housing Authority and apprised them of the seriousness concerned with the incoming fire alarm wire which was not followed from the original plans. They were approved by the Fire Alarm Superintendent by a transmittal letter dated May 8, 1981 from the Mechanical Engineer. After receiving the record, drawings, my observation was that the work had not been followed as originally approved. This item was also on the project punch list.

The fire safety for the people in the complex did not seem to me to be of great concern to the Selectmen because I was told in the office that "I could go to the State Fire Marshall if I wanted to, because there is nothing wrong with the way it was done". The feeling of fire safety concern was the same with the Fire Chief, Deputy Fire Chief, and Housing Authority, because no one understood the complexity of the problem, which I tried to explain, either individually, or at the meeting.

I knew what could happen because I had two surges in the past that came back over the fire alarm wire and blew internal parts within the main panel. When I received no backing, it was felt that I had to go to the State Fire Alarm Division for Housing for the Elderly and Public Buildings. After I explained the problem, I was told it was wrong by fire alarm standards, and it would have to be corrected soon.

After this step had been taken, I again talked to the Fire Chief to try to get him to understand the problem. He suggested that we have a meeting with the Housing Authority to better acquaint them with this problem. A meeting was set up and the day before the scheduled meeting, we were informed by letter (on March 29, 1984) that it would only be redundant, and that I should deal with the electrical contractor for the project. I have no authority to deal with the contractor. As an appointed official, my duties are to deal with a person or persons that govern a building or department that the Mattapoisett Fire Alarm System services within the town.

When the State Fire Alarm Division told the Housing Authority to change the wire so that it would go to the master box first, as per fire alarm standards, the Commissioners had a meeting and a member of the Board told the group that the master box was going to go on the last utility pole, as it entered the property before the wire goes underground. They never had the courtesy to invite me to the meeting and discuss what the contractor was to do.

It is too bad that something of this magnitude had to go on for so long before it was corrected.

During my initial inspection of the building, a few discrepancies were noted that were on the original plans and specifications, but were not adhered to. These were for the Commissioner's information only, because the Fire Alarm Department has no jurisdiction after the master box, except if a letter is given to the Fire Alarm Superintendent to go into the building and help find any problems or test the system. This is the case

I hope that as time goes on, if any problems should arise pertaining to the Fire Alarm System in this town, the Board will back me, and we can discuss and straighten out the problems within the town. Hence, I will not have to go out of town to get expert help in the fire alarm field to straighten out OUR problems. This town has very qualified people willing to help in different areas, if they are only asked.

Again, it is gratifying to know that the situation was rectified before a disaster or an individual was hurt, because someone did not follow the plans and specifications for the project.

Strange Proposal

EDITORIAL DCJ

The proposition put to New Bedford by Congressman Gerry Studts demonstrates that a grave misunderstanding of our political system might be added to this gentleman's other novel ideas.

Municipal seizure of a private business to operate is not something that the free enterprise system can consider without seeing the beginning of the end. If this is allowed under the Constitution of the United States, it should not be.

When a Socialist political system assumes power, the first act is to suppress all opposition. The second act is to nationalize industry. This, of course, means the take-over of all industry as well as a barrier against trade. No political system has ever demonstrated an ability to operate a business at a profit in a competitive market or to produce a product at a price that is competitive in a world market against private industry. Socialist industry may sell only in a controlled market, so starved for goods that its customers will wait for years on a quota list or que up daily in lines to buy the shoddiest merchandise.

New Bedford could no more make and sell good drills at a profit in a competitive market than Santa Claus could steal from tiny tots. But, even more unbelievable, is this proposition that a municipality in the United States should be led to contemplate the misuse of the privilege of eminent domain to assume control of a private business. This very narrow and limited power was designed as a last resort to use in a situation where the public good was stymied by an obstacle; for instance, where private property lay in the path of a highway where no alternative presented itself and where the public benefit could be demonstrated to far exceed the right of the property owner. The power of eminent domain was never intended to enable a political system to take over a business and to go into competition versus privately owned business which must make a profit or fail.

There is a solution to the Morse situation which would be very interesting to see, for it would demonstrate a point made repeatedly in negotiations. Why did Studds not propose that the union which represents Morse workers buy the business, modernize it, pay the workers higher wages yearly and use the excess profits to enrich the union coffers, or perhaps, share with employees if that seems fairer to the union executives.

Needlework Exhibit

Country Quilt and Cross Stitch, 9 East Howland Road, East Freetown, is pleased to announce a special showing of Connie Zobel's work. Her samplers will be on display in the shop June 12-23.

Historic pieces of needlework have been a rich source of inspiration to designer Connie Zobel of The Early American Sampler. Enthused by the Sampler collection of a fellow needleworker, Connie began her research into the history of this traditional form of needlework in 1978. Since then she has contracted with the Philadelphia Museum of Art to reproduce portions of the famous Whitman Sampler Collection.

Although these past years have opened many exciting opportunities as designer, lecturer, and business woman, Connie is foremost a homemaker. Her husband works for a bank in Concord, N.H.; their four children range in age from 3 to 13. Connie's early Sampler designs were used in barter exchange for produce and cord wood. Although this business has grown significantly it is still exclusively centered within the home.

Mark Mello, a visiting scientist at the Lloyd Center, has been the principal investigator in this study. He has prepared the first reference collection at the Lloyd Center of all moth and butterfly species in this area. To date, the moth collection includes over 450 species, and the butterfly reference study is now underway.

During this walk, participants will view the collection to date, and learn about the methods and materials of the study as well as the ecology -- food habits, overwintering, behavior -- of this region's butterflies. The group will visit several different habitats in this area to identify as many butterflies as possible. Information from this walk will contribute to the Lloyd Center's research.

Please call the Center at 990-5050 for additional information and to register for this walk.

This very special course provides an overview of seafood both from the viewpoint of the dynamics of the biological system from which seafood is harvested and from the processing and consumption of the sea's food resources. Each day of the course, a seafood luncheon will be prepared, and served with a variety of wines.

Seafood is a natural resource which is managed, and at times abused. This course will develop an appreciation for the variety of seafood available, and its preparation. Problems confronting the seafood industry, such as heavy metals and other environmental pollutants will be discussed. A

LLOYD CENTER ANNOUNCES THREE GRANTS

The Lloyd Center for Environmental Studies announces the awarding of three major research mini-grants and one minor grant for research regarding the coastal ecosystems in southeastern Massachusetts. Funds for this research are raised from private donations. Each project has the potential of making a significant contribution to the scientific community and to the management of our coastal resources. The three major mini-grants are a study of eel grass, beach grasses, the problems with the Allens Pond inlet, and the one minor grant will be to carbon 14 date corings taken from the sediment twenty-four feet below ground in the Demarest Lloyd State Park.

Eel grass forms meadows of greatly swaying green ribbon-like leaves in shallow estuarine waters along the coast of New England. Mr. Joseph Costa, born in New Bedford and currently a candidate for the Ph.D. degree in Marine Sciences with the Boston University Marine Program, Marine Biological Laboratory, Woods Hole, plans to examine the distribution and production of eel grass in estuaries and harbors of southeastern Massachusetts using aerial photography and ground level surveillance. Eel grass beds may be annoying to summer boaters and swimmers, but to myriad fish, waterfowl and invertebrates, including local bay scallops, eel grass provides food and shelter and a nursery ground. The Lloyd Center has awarded Mr. Costa $1500. for his study of eel grass.

A second $1500 research mini-grant was awarded to Ms. Jane Gemma and Ms. Margaret Carreiro, both students working for their Ph.D. degrees in the Department of Botany at the University of Rhode Island. Ms.
Gemma and Ms. Carreiro will be investigating the relationship between a fungus that affects the survival and growth of American dune (beach) grass at beaches in Dartmouth.
The fungus forms a close association with the root system of dune grass, Ammophila, and is vital to the survival of this grass and thus, sand dune stabilization. Results from this study will be useful in developing strategies of sand dune management, according to the research team.

Allens Pond is the subject of the third research grant awarded by the Lloyd Center.
